Fund manager's comment

The quarter was marked by strong fluctuations in bond markets as investors assessed economic prospects amid changes in fiscal policy and geopolitical developments. The ECB maintained a cautious stance, leading to an adjustment in expectations for a slower monetary easing, although it cut interest rates twice by 25 basis points. Future actions will depend on upcoming economic data. The Greek bond market followed the European trend, recording milder losses. The BCEC1T Index closed at -1.1%, compared to -1.98% for the German BCEG1T Index. The yield spread between Greek and German 10-year bonds narrowed to 82 from 85 basis points.

The Athens Stock Exchange stood out globally in the first quarter of 2025, delivering a +14.7% return and closing at 1,685.24 points. Market capitalization rose to €118 billion, while average daily transactions reached €189.8 million (+14% compared to the previous quarter). This growth is attributed to the strong performance of the banking sector, high dividend yields, and the positive financial results of listed companies. The prospect of upgrading the ASE to a developed market and corporate profitability support valuations and business transformation plans. A key milestone of the quarter was Greece's credit rating upgrade to investment grade by Moody's, paving the way for the ASE's inclusion in developed markets. Shift in global markets compared to the previous quarter. The S&P 500 declined by -4.6% ($), while Europe (STOXX 600 +5.2% €) and Asia (MSCI Asia ex Japan +1.4% $) moved positively. Japan recorded losses of -10% (JPY), partially offset by the strengthening of the yen. Global economic prospects remain uncertain due to geopolitical tensions, trade instability, and fiscal constraints. Significant uncertainty surrounds the new U.S. tariff package expected in April, while U.S. policies on Ukraine and the Middle East have shown limited results. Global growth is expected to slow in 2025. Opportunities emerge in Eastern European markets and the defense industry, alongside a shift from growth to value stocks. Banks, energy, select industrial sectors, and utilities outperformed, while the technology sector suffered the largest losses.
